"Just Out Of College."

The largest and, with the possible exception of the "Are You a Mason?" people, the best company of players was here Saturday evening to play George Ade's latest comedy, "Just Out Of College." A matinee was scheduled, but had to be called off on account of the impossibility of getting the scenery up on time.

The audience which turned out looked a trifle thinner than it really was for this reason: the $1.50 seats were only half filled, while nearly all the $1.00 and 75 seats were taken. Since the most expensive seats are the most prominent, the vacancies were apparent. But the audience was far above the average in intelligence and appreciation. Applause was given where it was deserved and all of the songs were encored.

The plot of the play is familiar to all who make any pretense of keeping up with the national dramatic news. It centers about a young man, just out of college and also out of money, who is in love with the daughter of the wealthy president of the pickle trust. The old man to test the young one's business ability lends him $20,000 with the provision that he stay away from the girl for a month and that if he makes any money in that time he is to get the girl. With the money thus acquired the youthful lover invests the money in an opposing company and brings the old gentleman to terms.

Kenneth Davenport, the leading man, was a good actor and might have been good looking had he worn better clothes. His work in the second and third acts was a marked improvement over that in the first. Miss Ethel Lloyd, the young girl in love, could not very well have been improved upon. She was pretty, dressed becomingly and played her part to perfection. George C. Denton as the old business man was also excellent. Wm. Henderson and Mary B. Henderson deserve special mention. They played eccentric parts without overdoing them, which is rather unusual. Lester Crawford was the typical stage college boy and reminded one very much of George Cohan.

There were actually in the cast twenty-eight people—count 'em—and the scenery was all special. The play was not a melodrama, nor a tramp show, nor a so-called musical comedy—though there was music in it. It was a good, clean, high class comedy.

The recital by the faculty in the School of Music of Central college at Murrell Auditorium Monday evening brought out a goodly number of people in spite of the other attractions in town. A sympathetic audience, too, it was and thoroughly appreciated the uncommonly high grade of music that was presented.

The one disappointment of the evening was the absence of Mrs. Alfred Franklin Smith, who owing to illness was unable to appear. Until this year Mrs. Smith had appeared on every faculty program since her coming to the College. Her singing has ever been a source of delight to the people of Lexington and her absence was keenly felt Monday evening.

The program was opened by Moszkowski's Caprice Espagnole played most capably by Miss Jo Hinesley. Miss Hinesley is a Lexington girl and people of the town have watched with interest her rise as a pianist. Her playing of the demanding Moszkowski number showed that she is still practicing and not devoting herself entirely to teaching.

Miss Martha Pilcher as a violinist has an established reputation in this city. The Swan was played smoothly and with excellent tone effect. The second number was brilliant and it was easy to see that Miss Pilcher had acquired a firmer control of her instrument than she had last year and had lost none of her ability in musical interpretation. She played for an encore Hauser's Cradle Song.

The double number by Miss Mary Pugh was awaited with considerable interest, as this was her initial appearance before a Lexington audience. The impression she made was altogether a favorable one. She is a handsome young lady, entirely at ease on the stage, and possesses an excellent soprano voice. Her head tones particularly are good. As an encore she gave "To My First Love" by Lohr.

Possibly the greatest interest of the evening centered around Mr. Rudolph King, the new teacher of piano, and when he came forward he was greeted by an outburst of hearty applause. Mr. King after acknowledging the applause sat down to the piano as if he were sitting down to a good meal and he played without the slightest show of anxiety or effort. The Grieg number had not progressed far until the intelligent listener realized that a pianist and musician of uncommon worth was at the piano. His technique is of the ample sort that every concert pianist possesses nowadays, but it does not consist in digital dexterity and muscular power alone. There is beauty and charm in its every part—the piano sings under his fingers and even the brilliant or showy phrase takes on softness and loveliness of quality. The instrument becomes the medium not of display but of musical expression under his hands, and listening grows into a satisfaction and a joy. But Mr. King is a composer as well as a performer. In his second number he gave an illustration of his ability along that line. His Caprice is unostentatious, but dainty, highly musical and thoroughly delightful. His encore was a gavotte by Gruenfeld.

Miss Lucie Lowry, the new head of the Elocution department, was another to make her first bow before a local audience. She is a dainty and lovely young lady with an excellent stage presence. Her number last night was mostly in French dialect, and her two encores were in Italian and Negro dialect. That her reading was enjoyed is evidenced by the fact that she received two encores.

A fitting close to the programme was the Sonata Appassionata by Miss Ralston, the head of the music faculty. It was said that Miss Ralston was not feeling well and was under a nervous strain, but her playing certainly showed no such indications. She attacked the most difficult passages with the utmost assurance and played them superbly. Her runs and arpeggios were clean and even, and her expression was all that could be desired. She responded to an encore by playing Poldini's March Mignon.

Altogether the recital was a success and the public may feel assured that the musical faculty at Central is competent in every particular.

At the Church Bazar.

Vicar (effusively to conductor at close of a brilliant programme)—The music sounded very delightful in the distance, and I can assure you it did not in anyway interfere with the sales.—Punch.

The Doom of Bridge.

A reaction against bridge appears to be getting in English society. It is even becoming common to hear people declare that they do not play, and the younger set is making a stand against it. In its stead billiards seems to be gaining ground.—N. Y. Tribune.

Make Living from the Sea.

In Norway and Sweden 36 persons out of every 1,000 live by seafaring. The next best average in this particular is in England, where there are 25 per every 1,000.

The best portraits are those which there is a slight mixture of caricature.—Macaulay.

Coughs of Children

Especially night coughs. Nature needs a little help to quiet the irritation, control the inflammation, check the progress of the disease. Our advice—give the children Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask your doctor if this is his advice also. He knows best. Do as he says.

We publish our formulae. We banish ailments from our medicine. We urge you to consult your doctor.

If you think constipation is of trifling consequence, just ask your doctor. It will disabuse you of that notion in a moment. "Correct it, at once!" he says. Then ask him about Ayer's Pile. A mild liver pill, all vegetable.
